

New APEGM Heritage Wiki Website

The Heritage Committee of the APEGM is pleased to announce that their Wiki site went live on October 1, 2013. It is ready for your comments and input. The URL is <http://heritage.apegm.mb.ca>.

You can access this site without registering but if you wish to make additions or changes, we will require you to register, providing a minimum of personal information (name and email address). Registration allows us to follow-up on comments and changes. Your information will not be used for any other purpose.

This new site is designed to let our members and the general public learn about the impacts our engineering and geoscience professionals and their projects have had in our own province and around the world.

The site is small and in its infancy, but it is designed to grow. We encourage your comments, additions and corrections. We know that our membership is a vast repository of knowledge and we think that this site will provide a simple way to capture our collective knowledge and to make it accessible to our membership and the general public.

The site is not a hall of fame. We are interested in the past but also in the present. Individual and corporate input is welcomed.

This is a great opportunity for all of us to add to the collective knowledge of our rich heritage. Articles can be as technical as you wish. The target audience is not just our membership but also the general public. Long articles can be broken down into sub-articles and linked. We are also interested in general engineering and geoscience articles that could provide an overview for the benefit of the general public and members interested in broadening their knowledge (for example, what are some of the constraints and design requirements associated with cold weather, sparse population, difficult site access).

The site has detailed instructions for use, including videos. Don't worry about formatting details, our experienced reviewers will do that for you.

The site is operating under a Creative Commons License, which allows others to modify your work and which will allow the association to republish the work in other formats. Details regarding this license and copyright are on the site.

If you have a story to tell, we'd love to hear from you.

Thank you,

APEGM Heritage Committee

heritage@apegm.mb.ca